

Hollywood Goes On Location: Leon Smith Captures the Magic of Moviemaking

In the early days of Hollywood, movies were made almost exclusively in studios. But as the industry grew and technology improved, filmmakers began to venture out on location to capture the 真实性 and beauty of the natural world.

One of the most celebrated photographers of Hollywood's on-location era was Leon Smith. Smith began his career in the early 1930s, working on such classic films as Gone with the Wind and The Wizard of Oz. He went on to photograph some of the most iconic films of all time, including Casablanca, Singin' in the Rain, and The Sound of Music.
