This book tells the story of how President Franklin D. Roosevelt and his top military commanders led America to victory in World War II. It is a fascinating account of leadership, strategy, and the power of teamwork.

Roosevelt was a brilliant politician and a skilled diplomat. He was able to build a strong coalition of allies, including Great Britain, the Soviet Union, and China. He also played a key role in developing the strategy that led to the Allied victory.

Roosevelt's military commanders were some of the most talented and experienced in the world. They included General Dwight D. Eisenhower, General George Marshall, and Admiral Ernest J. King. These men were able to work together effectively to develop and execute the plans that led to the Allied victory.

The book is based on extensive research, including interviews with many of the key participants. It is a well-written and engaging account of one of the most important events in American history.

If you are interested in World War II, leadership, or strategy, then I highly recommend this book.
