

Optic Gaming: The Making of Esports Champions

Optic Gaming was founded in 2006 by Hector "H3CZ" Rodriguez. Rodriguez was a former professional Halo player who had a vision for a new kind of esports organization. He wanted to create an organization that would be more than just a team of players. He wanted to create a community of gamers who would support each other and strive to be the best.

The early years of Optic Gaming were tough. The organization had limited resources and had to compete with much larger and more established organizations. But Rodriguez and his team never gave up. They worked hard and eventually began to see success.

In 2010, Optic Gaming won its first major championship in Call of Duty. This win was a major breakthrough for the organization and helped to put Optic Gaming on the map.
