The war began in June 1812, when the United States declared war on Great Britain. The Americans initially hoped to conquer Canada, but they were met with stiff resistance from the British and their Native American allies. The war was fought on a number of fronts, including the Great Lakes, the Niagara Peninsula, and the Chesapeake Bay.

Sir George Prevost was appointed Governor-General of Canada in 1811. He was a career soldier with a distinguished record, and he was well-respected by his troops. Prevost's strategy for the war was to defend Canada from American invasion and to avoid any major offensive operations.

Prevost's strategy was based on a number of factors. First, he knew that the British were outnumbered by the Americans, and he did not want to risk a decisive battle. Second, he believed that the Americans would eventually tire of the war and sue for peace. Third, he hoped that by defending Canada, he could convince the Americans that it was not worth the effort to try to conquer it.

The War of 1812 was fought on a number of fronts, and there were many different campaigns and commanders involved. Some of the most important campaigns included:

- The Invasion of Canada: The Americans launched a number of invasions of Canada, but they were all unsuccessful. The most significant invasion attempt was the Battle of Queenston Heights in 1812, which ended in a British victory.

- The Battle of the Thames: This battle was fought in 1813, and it resulted in the death of Tecumseh, a famous Shawnee chief who was allied with the British. The Battle of the Thames was a major blow to the British war effort.
- The Battle of New Orleans: This battle was fought in 1815, and it was the last major battle of the War of 1812. The Americans won a decisive victory, and the British were forced to withdraw from the United States.

Some of the most important commanders in the War of 1812 included:

- Sir George Prevost: The British Governor-General of Canada and commander-in-chief of the British forces in North America.
- William Henry Harrison: The American general who defeated the British at the Battle of Tippecanoe and the Battle of the Thames.
- Andrew Jackson: The American general who won the Battle of New Orleans.
- Tecumseh: A famous Shawnee chief who allied with the British during the War of 1812.

There were a number of turning points in the War of 1812, including:

- The Battle of Queenston Heights: This battle was a British victory, and it helped to convince the Americans that it would be difficult to conquer Canada.
- The Battle of the Thames: This battle was an American victory, and it led to the death of Tecumseh. The Battle of the Thames was a major blow to the British war effort.

- The Battle of New Orleans: This battle was an American victory, and it forced the British to withdraw from the United States. The Battle of New Orleans was the last major battle of the War of 1812.
