

The Great Depression and World War II: A Time of Great Upheaval

The Great Depression and World War II were two of the most significant events of the 20th century. These events had a profound impact on the world, and their effects are still felt today.

The Great Depression

The Great Depression was a worldwide economic crisis that began in the United States in the 1930s. The crisis was caused by a number of factors, including the stock market crash of 1929, the collapse of the banking system, and a decline in demand for goods and services. The Great Depression had a devastating impact on the United States and the world. Millions of people lost their jobs, and many businesses went bankrupt. The crisis also led to a decline in international trade and investment.
